Stuttgart Raided "in Strength"

A report issued by the British Air Ministry yesterday states:—"On Thursday night aircraft of Bomber Command were over Southern Germany in strength with Stuttgart as the main objective. Cloud prevented full observation of results.

"Lancasters also bombed Friedrichshafen, and Mosquitos attacked targets at Munich and in North-West Germany. Mines were laid in enemy waters.

"Seven of our aircraft are missing."

Stuttgart, Friedrichshafen and Munich, all in Southern Germany are within about 100 miles of each other. The main attack was on Stuttgart, says the British Air Ministry News Service

DAYLIGHT RAID

United States Headquarters announce that United States Eighth Air Force Flying Fortresses, supported by Thunderbolts, attacked targets in Bremen yesterday.

The German News Agency said last night:—

"Strong enemy forces this afternoon carried out a terror raid on North-western German coastal territory. Particularly in the centre of the city of Bremen there was large-scale destruction in residential quarters, and damage was done to public buildings and cultural monuments.

"The population suffered losses."

Six ME 110s were shot down by Spitfires of two Fighter Command squadrons yesterday, states the British Air Ministry News Service. Four were destroyed by two pilots of an Australian squadron and two by pilots of the County of Chester Auxiliary squadron during patrol in the Channel. Several Spitfires of the Australian squadron drove off eight ME 110s in a battle fought just above sea level yesterday morning.

Scheme to Increase Milk Production

Four Ayrshire cows, on which Irish dairymen are placing hopes of a big increase in Eire's milk production, will arrive in Dublin to-day.

For some years the tendency in this country has been to concentrate more on the breeding of dual-purpose cattle. This policy has been criticised by milk producers, who assert that, while it may produce good beef cattle, it has been responsible for low milk yields. Applications for licences to permit the introduction of a new strain of heavy milkers were made, and the result is that, after some negotiation, the Department gave authority for several Ayrshire cows to be imported. These will be maintained by Messrs. Craigie Brothers, of Finglas, Co. Dublin, and if they give satisfaction, they will represent the nucleus of a herd which will supply animals to the three hundred dairymen who, in Dublin, Wicklow, Meath, and Kildare, supply all Dublin's milk needs. The aim of the scheme is to increase milk production to such an extent that the cost of milk to the consumer will come down.

It is claimed that the yield of the Ayrshire averages about a thousand gallons, whereas few animals in this country give more than from 300 to 450 gallons.

Michael Kelly, a Passage West, County Cork, unmarried man, was fatally injured yesterday in a fall at Rushbrooke Dockyard, where he was employed.

FIFTH ARMY LOCKED IN BATTLE ON VOLTURNO

Allies Take "Key" to Defence Line

THE heaviest fighting on the Fifth Army front for a week is raging along the Volturno River, states an A.P. front-line message received late last night. American troops now hold positions along the river's south bank, the report adds. There was a great day-long artillery duel of guns massed on both sides, and furious hand-to-hand fighting took place in the town of Villa Literno. The Germans captured the northern part of the town, but were later driven out.

The German News Agency stated last night that German forces had abandoned forward positions on the heights at Gambatesa, between Benevento and Termoli, after fierce battles.

(From Reuter's Special Correspondent at Allied H.Q.)

The armies of General Clark and Marshal Kesselring are now facing each other across the 100-ft.-wide waters of the Volturno River, 100 miles from Rome.

Along a 17-mile stretch from Capua to the sea the Fifth Army is massing on the southern bank of the river, while the Germans are hastily manning their defences on the north bank. Already, however, the key to the Volturno line has fallen to the Allies with the capture of Capua, and the advance on Rome has entered a new phase.

HEIGHTS WON

On the Adriatic coast, too, the Germans have suffered another reverse. General Montgomery, after beating back numerous counter-attacks by Tiger tanks and infantry at Termoli, launched an assault which carried his troops to some high ground. The Eighth Army positions have been considerably improved.

Capua, huddled along the south bank of the Volturno, 18 miles north of Naples, fell after a determined push against strong opposition.

In the mountainous central sector around Benevento the Fifth Army is still fighting its way forward in face of stiff resistance and in weather which steadily grows worse. If the gains are not spectacular the Allied troops are doing a magnificent job in the steep valleys and tortuous defiles, maintaining a firm link between the Fifth and Eighth Armies.

The weather is also deteriorating on the Eighth Army sector and the air forces, which gave good support to Montgomery's men in repelling determined attacks at Termoli, have been severely handicapped by low-lying cloud, making strafing operations against tanks and infantry impossible.

BITTER FIGHTING

Captain Sertorius, the German commentator, said last night that the Eighth Army had increased its pressure against the German positions on the western bank of the Biferno River and had brought up fresh reserves. "Fighting is very violent in the Termoli area," he added. "The bulk of the Eighth Army has succeeded in linking up with the bridgehead in this sector and has thus made it secure."

Sertorius said it seemed likely that the Allies would only open their main attack on the Volturno line once they had carried out an artillery concentration in strength. He referred to the possibility of an Allied landing at an advanced point on the Tyrrhenian flank.

Reinforcements and artillery for the 5th Army are now being sent forward.

Paquis, the Paris radio commentator, said last night:—The Fifth Army has suddenly braced itself to an energetic attack on the whole length of the western sector, and the Volturno River has been crossed at many points.—(Reuter.)

Hitler: Perseverance Means Victory

A REVIEW of the present political and military situation of the war was given by Herr Hitler at a meeting of high party leaders, it was disclosed yesterday. The meeting took place on Wednesday.

"The war can never be lost," the Fuehrer said, "if the German people do not lose their morale."

Other spokesmen at the meeting were Herr Himmler, Gestapo Chief and Minister of the Interior; Dr. Speer, the Armaments Chief; Admiral Doenitz, Naval Commander-in-Chief; Luftwaffe Field-Marshal Milch, Schepmann, Chief of Staff of the S.A., and Dr. Ley, the Labour Front Leader.

The meeting—which the German account said was to signify "the determination to carry on the war effort to the utmost exertion of all national forces"—was presided over by Martin Bormann, Herr Hitler's deputy. Herr Hitler said:—

"In this world-historic struggle, which, like all great historical struggles, produces its own sequence of climaxes and tensions, not only the power of arms, but also the will-power and perseverance of those who bear them are of decisive importance for victory.

"Arms alone mean nothing unless they are backed up by human will. Whatever the war situation may be, the determination and the unswerving perseverance in the pursuit of our aims must always remain the same.

"The National Socialist Party is the embodiment of this determination. Its struggle for power has been the model, the example for to-day's fateful struggle of the German people.

"The party has never allowed itself to be discouraged by set-backs. Its fighting spirit, its power of action, and its hard resoluteness and extreme readiness to help provide the German people again to-day with moral backing and support, particularly in the difficult hours of air attacks.

"If the German people preserve this morale, which they have shown on the battlefields and at home, the war can never be lost, but must and will bring a great German victory.

"We shall strike everywhere, and never tire until our aim is reached. Take home in your hearts the unshakable faith that if our determination does not falter this war will end with a great German victory."

Late last night a passage from Herr Hitler's speech, omitted in the German News Agency report, was broadcast by German Home Radio:

"The German people know that their existence is at stake in this struggle. The bridges behind them are burned."

Herr Himmler said: "Defeatism is non-existent among the German people. Isolated cases of this kind will be eradicated without mercy."

Dr. Speer reviewed recent measures in German armament productions, and said: "Only the most ruthless measures will make it possible to gain victory."

Emergency Rooms

Dr. Ley, Labour Front leader, announced that simple "emergency rooms" were being set up in country settlements, and would help to overcome the effects of bomb terror.

These emergency rooms would consist of one kitchen-sitting room and one bedroom. The main part of the rooms would be factory-produced in component parts.

"Pope Virtually a Prisoner"

—DR. DOWNEY.

The Archbishop of Liverpool, Dr. Downey, has made the following statement on behalf of the Catholic Hierarchy of England and Wales:—

"We learn with regret that His Holiness Pope Pius XII is virtually a prisoner in the hands of the Germans, without freedom of access to his spiritual children throughout the world.

"The conscience of Christendom is shocked at this latest outrage against religion, and we appeal confidently to our fellow-countrymen to join with us in prayer for the safety and liberty of the Holy Father."

"Flying Bomb" at Salerno

Rocket-assisted gliders—mentioned recently by Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons—were used by the Germans against Allied shipping in the Gulf of Salerno, according to Hanson Baldwin, New York Times military commentator, quoted by New York Radio last night.

"The 'flying bomb' seems to be launched from a 'plane that remains out of range of the ships' A.A. batteries," he writes. "It apparently has some sort of rocket propulsion and seems to be fitted with wings which enable it to glide rapidly towards the target. It is either radio-controlled by its parent 'plane or has some sort of electronomic device like the magnetic mine or the magnetic torpedo that causes it to drop near or strike the target ship.

"The rockets carry a fairly large explosive charge, but reduce the 'plane's speed and manœuvrability and maximum load is three rockets."—(Reuter.)

Efforts to Stem Spread of Rickets

DISCUSSIONS have recently taken place between the Government and dietetic and medical experts concerning efforts to stem the increase in the spread of rickets.

Three months ago the Irish Times called attention to the development of a serious situation, and the medical authorities have since been pressing for an amelioration by way of a reduction in the 100 per cent. wheat extract, the opinion being that the presence of phytic acid in the whole flour is a major contributing factor.

In existing circumstances, with a decline in home-produced wheat and the prospect of securing imports not too bright, it is doubtful if any easement in the flour position can be anticipated. The suggestion that Vitamin D will meet the situation is rejected, because the acid forms a compound with calcium and negatives its effect completely. Consequently, no amount of Vitamin D will bring the calcium in whole flour into the circulation. Experiments in Britain have proved that the absorption of acid was unaffected by Vitamin D.

Barley admixture, which necessarily will be light because of the weight of the bread, may bring a certain improvement in the situation, because very white barley flour on an extraction of 60 or 70 per cent. will be used, and it will contain less phytic acid than the brown flour.

The onrush of winter, when the disease gets a grip, is giving impetus to consideration of the matter.

Dail to Debate 'Bus Fares

The question of 'bus tickets for Dublin artisans and school children is to be raised during the coming session of the Dail. Many thousands of harassed housewives and workingmen will welcome eagerly a cut in 'bus fares, especially those living in such places as Cabra, Larkhill, Kimmage, Crumlin and Drimnagh, which are mostly 3d. fares for adults.

Inquiries made by a reporter yesterday elicited the fact that 'bus fares alone were costing families in these out of the way localities up to 12s. per week.

Count Storza in London

Count Storza, the former Italian Foreign Minister and leading anti-Fascist, has arrived in London from America. It is expected that he will shortly leave for Italy.

War Chiefs Gather in Delhi

THE largest gathering ever seen in India of British and American Generals, Admirals and Air Chiefs is at present in Delhi, helping Lord Louis Mountbatten to plan the Allied offensive settled in broad outline at the last Churchill-Roosevelt conference, a Reuter telegram from New Delhi announced last night. The main purpose of the Delhi consultations is to work out the details.

The group includes General Sir Claude Auchinleck, C.-in-C., India; Major-General George Stratmeyer, United States Air Officer commanding in China, Burma and India; Air Chief Marshal Sir Richard Pierse, Air Officer commanding India; Admiral Sir James Somerville, C.-in-C., Eastern Fleet; Vice-Admiral John Godfrey, Flag Officer commanding Royal Indian Navy; Lieut.-General Joseph Stilwell, C.-in-C., American Ground Forces in China, Burma and India; Lieut.-General Brehon Somervell, Chief of United States Army Supply Services; Lieut.-General E. L. Morris, Chief of Staff, India; Brigadier-General Howard C. Davidson, commanding the United States 10th Army Air Force, and Brigadier-General Ferris.

They will have the benefit of data gathered as a result of the Anglo-American air attacks on occupied Burma for more than a year, as well as the valuable lessons learned by Major-General Charles Wingate's expedition early this year.

A Chinese military spokesman said yesterday in Chungking that he regarded the arrival of Lord Louis Mountbatten at Delhi as an indication of imminent Allied action against Japan from the south-east. The spokesman mentioned in particular the area of Malaya, Thailand, Indo-China and Burma.

NEW GUINEA

Australian troops in New Guinea have pushed another nine miles north up the Ramu valley, and advance elements are only 28 miles from Bogadjim, on Astrolabe Bay, according to Reuter's special correspondent at Allied Headquarters, South-west Pacific.

Another 16 of the Japanese barges trying to evacuate the garrison from Kolombangara have been sunk or damaged. The abandonment of Vila airbase and the southern part of the island means that the Japanese have withdrawn their air fleets 100 miles to the Buin-Faisi area of Bougainville.

American warships have sunk a Japanese cruiser and two destroyers in a battle in the Vella Gulf, it was officially announced to-day. Vella Gulf is in the Central Solomons.

The battle, in which American losses are described as light, apparently foiled a Japanese attempt to pull off the remnants of their fleeing garrison from the northern shores of Kolombangara.—(Reuter.)

"U-Boats Coming Back in Force"

COLONEL KNOX, American Navy Secretary, said yesterday:—"The U-boats are returning in force. The menace is just as serious as ever it was."

He added:—"Submarine warfare is not yet over, and will not be until the end of the war."—(Reuter.)

Dublin Man Shot in Error

—Minister's Regret

THE Minister for Justice last night expressed his regret in connection with the shooting case at Harold's Cross, Dublin, on Thursday night, when a man was wounded by a Civic Guard.

The official statement says:—

"On 7th instant a member of the Garda Siochana on plain clothes duty observed a man whom he believed to be a member of an unlawful organisation, who was wanted for interrogation in connection with the murder on 9th September, 1942, of Detective-Sergeant O'Brien. The Garda was aware that the wanted man usually carried firearms. He called on the man to halt and to put up his hands, and, when the latter failed to do so, the Garda fired, wounding him in the hip.

"It was subsequently discovered that the wounded man was Mr. Robert J. Byrne, of 124 Leinster road, Rathmines, and the Garda Siochana are satisfied that Mr. Byrne is not the wanted man and has no connection with any unlawful organisation.

"The Minister for Justice desires to express his regret for this unfortunate occurrence."

Cavan Attempted Murder Charge

An attempt to rob Bailliebor' (Co. Cavan) Post Office by a man who fired a shot at another man, who gave chase when the alarm was raised, had a sequel at the local Court when Michael Clarke, a young farmer, of Beglieve, Bailieboro', was charged with the attempted murder of John James Mahood, Knocknashammer.

Evidence was given that a man entered the office on September 10th and, producing a revolver, demanded the sub-postmistress to hand over the pension money. Despite his warning that "If you scream I'll shoot you," she got down behind the counter and called for assistance, whereupon the armed man left. Three men came to her aid from the kitchen, and gave chase to the raider, who fired a shot from a revolver at John James Mahood when he entered the street. The man took shelter and the raider got away.

The Justice refused informations, owing to lack of evidence of identification, on the charge of attempted murder, as well as charges of attempted robbery and possession of a revolver.

Transport Problem Inquiry Sought

The Executive Council of the Merchant Lorry Owners' Association, which met at 28 Westmoreland street, Dublin, last night, unanimously decided to arrange for the tabling of a motion in the Dail seeking to annul the Emergency Powers (Mechanically Propelled Vehicles) Order, 1942, which enables the Minister to schedule areas for the transport pooling scheme. The motion requests the setting up of a Select Committee to examine the present transport problem, and to report on the most equitable and practicable scheme for solving the nation's transport problems during the present emergency.

Serious Aspects of Beet Factories' Strike

A CONFERENCE between representatives of the Carlow factory and the management of the Irish Sugar Company will meet in Dublin this morning in an effort to avoid an extension of the strike of Mallow sugar cooks to the other beet factories. The Department of Industry and Commerce has declared that under Emergency Powers (No. 260) Order, 1943, the Minister is debarred from accepting an application for a bonus order from any workers unless he is satisfied that there has been neither a strike nor threat of a strike to compel the employers to join in such application.

Keymen in the Thurles factory have gone out in sympathy with the Mallow cooks, who are claiming a campaign bonus of £50 instead of the £10 bonus which they have been given heretofore.

Serious aspects of a possible extension of the dispute to the other two factories at Tuam and Carlow are that it would throw back on the farmers large quantities of beet which they were induced to grow, and also that such an eventuality would affect seriously rolling stock, all arrangements for transport having been made by the railway company.

"Yesterday," writes our special correspondent, "I met the nine sugar cooks of Mallow. They are the men who, by withholding their services at the Mallow Sugar Beet Factory, have held up the distribution of a few million pounds to Irish farmers, have immobilised fleets of railway wagons and extra staff, at a time when county surveyors are calling out for wagons for turf and millers are calling out for wagons for grain."

A priest of the town and a union official are trying to bring about a settlement.

The wages of sugar cooks range from £4 17s. during the off-season to £6 1s. during the campaign, with a bonus of about 15s. per week. Their point of view is:—

"We have taken this action feeling we have a good chance of success, as we have a monopoly of this work. We are members of the Irish Engineering Industrial Union, but we recognise we have acted outside the union and not in accordance with union rules. When the foreigners were brought here at the opening of the factory they were given their fares to and from their country, and also free houses, light, and fuel. As the equivalent of that we are asking for £50 a year, which is, we think, not excessive. As a compromise, we are willing to take an increase of 2d. per hour, though 3d. an hour would be a nearer equivalent to the extras. We will not go back unless our demands are granted."

Our special correspondent, who travelled to the factory, could not obtain an interview with the manager. One of his subordinates said that no information could be given.

Most of the factory workers, including many in permanent or semi-permanent employment, have been given notice, our correspondent learned. To-day Mallow factory, which would have been one of the busiest industrial centres in Ireland, will be at a standstill.

Northern Court Appointment

Mr. James Graham Breakey, Senior Assistant Registrar of the Supreme Court of Judicature, Northern Ireland, has been appointed Registrar in room of the late Mr. J. M. Davies. He was formerly in the service of the Irish Supreme Court.

Russians in "Greatest Offensive of All Time"—Moscow Report

"THE greatest offensive of all time" is how Reuter's Special Correspondent in Moscow describes the present fighting in Russia. Besides their daring attempt to cross the Dnieper at three widely separated points, Soviet forces are also engaged in bitter fighting at three bridgeheads on the west bank of the Dnieper and at Nevel, where, according to the German News Agency, the "Russians have succeeded in breaking through."

Soviet tanks have been ferried across the Dnieper, according to a late Reuter message from Moscow.

The Red Army is surging forward in a giant assault to crash the Dnieper defences, Reuter's correspondent states. Fighting is going on along all fronts from the Black Sea to north of Vitebsk, and at many points the Germans are menaced with a division into isolated sectors. The German Command is counter-attacking with powerful tank formations and massed infantry to stem the Soviet hold on the three principal western bridgeheads on the Dnieper.

With the establishment of the bridgehead in the Pripet confluence and marshlands the Germans are more isolated than ever and the front is no longer continuous between Gomel and Kiev.

The Soviet drives all along the front menace the German line with a division into three separate groups.

Latest despatches indicate further Russian progress in the Nevel region and this may result in the German forces north of Lake Ilmen and before Leningrad finding themselves threatened with isolation on a big scale. The capture of Kirichi, on the Volkhov River front, opens a new lifeline into Leningrad.

Dnepropetrovsk and Zaporozhe, which the German Command had counted upon as winter-line bastions of the Dnieper front, may soon become death traps.

CONSOLIDATING

In the north, the Red Army is consolidating its break-through to Nevel, key railway junction north of Vitebsk.

Developing the bridgeheads below Kremenchung and opposite Pereyaslavl, the Russians are threatening to break through to the central railway junction of Znamenka, loss of which would be a crippling blow for any German forces retreating from the lower Dniepер towards Odessa.

In addition, the Red Army is hammering at Zaporozhe and Melitipol, on the Dnieper bend, in the extreme south.

The German News Agency stated last night that south of Velikie Luki the Russians "succeeded in breaking through with their tanks.

"The Russians intended to widen the breach at Nevel to the north-west and south-west, and threw in 12 infantry divisions with strong tank and airforce units."

Captain Sertorius, the German overseas commentator, referred to increased Soviet pressure on the Nevel sector, and said there was no longer "any doubt that the Russians have large tactical aims in their minds. Strong infantry forces and masses of tanks have been mobilised there, and battles are raging to widen the breach achieved on Wednesday in a westerly and southerly direction."

The Russian communiqué said that bridgeheads were being enlarged on the Dnieper; that Soviet troops advanced up to 7½ miles towards Vitebsk, capturing over 150 localities, and that the offensive was continued in the Nevel sector, more than 60 places being occupied. On the North Caucasian front, it was stated, "our troops continued to mop up German troops in the northern part of the Taman Peninsula."

NORTH WANTS EIRE AS GOOD NEIGHBOUR

"WE have no designs on Eire. We are prepared to live side by side with her as a good neighbour," Sir Basil Brooke, Northern Premier, told delegates from all parts of Northern Ireland, at a conference of the Ulster Unionist Party held yesterday in Belfast to consider means of strengthening their organisation.

However, we cannot ignore the fact, he said, that our enemies, both within and without our gates, are constantly active, and that they never lose an opportunity to press their campaign against us and to try to undermine our position.

The Prime Minister made a strong appeal for unity, stating: "If the Unionist Party were to become fundamentally divided, and therefore powerless, it is conceivable that Ulster, as we know it, might disappear."

"It would be useless to deny that at the moment there is some division within the party," he said. "It is easy to see, but it is not easy to see the reason or the cure for it."

There was no divergence of view on the question of winning the war. That was the major leading question.

Discussing the division that exists in the Party, Sir Basil asked whether it was deep-seated or was it simply an unusual variety of view points not always responsibly expressed? Was there too much independence of action and thought? Whatever it was, he felt strongly that it was now necessary to close the ranks.

"I am asking each of you," he said "to put party before sectional interests and Ulster's interests over all."

WARNING

Sir Basil went on to outline measures by which he thought Party unity might be obtained. He spoke of the need for greater and more effective publicity about Northern Ireland's position, and he ended his speech with a warning that if they allowed members to be divided they would run the risk of being destroyed.

The conference rejected a resolution which asked that information of proposed legislation be given to divisional associations in time to enable them to express their views. A second proposal urging that the present constitution of the Unionist Council was undemocratic, and asking that it be amended, was also rejected.

Resolutions approved asked for the appointment of a paid organiser to undertake the political education of young people, that a school should be established or a series of lectures arranged to enable Unionists to become conversant with the history and principles of the party and its proposals regarding current problems, and that the revision of the electors' lists should be resumed.

Man Shot in Londonderry

A shooting incident occurred last night in the black-out in Londonderry, when William Donnelly (27) was wounded in the breast.

The shooting took place in a densely-populated area. Donnelly walked about two hundred yards up Union street, where his home is, and he then collapsed. He was removed to hospital, and his condition is regarded as critical.

Bacon and Pork Prices Unchanged

IN connection with the complaint of bacon curers that, at the current price of pigs they find it difficult to pay over-head expenses and make a profit, thus implying that a new selling price for bacon should be fixed, the Minister for Supplies announces that he has no intention of increasing the maximum prices of bacon or pork.

These prices are fixed by orders already in force. Bacon curers and pork butchers, he says, will be obliged to observe these prices, and it is a matter for their own judgment to determine the prices which they can afford to pay for pigs.

Ship's Master Gives Evidence at Cork Inquiry

THE official inquiry at Cork into last December's Cork Harbour tragedy, when two launches were sunk with the loss of five lives while servicing the s.s. Irish Poplar, entered its ninth day yesterday.

Captain H. R. Brooks, master of the s.s. Kenmare, called on behalf of Captain Taylor, of the Irish Poplar, said he was bringing his ship into Cork Harbour on the evening of the tragedy and saw the lights of the examination boat at close range. They were "very, very poor."

Regarding the practice of boarding pilots in Cork Harbour, he said there was no wireless in the harbour. He had boarded many people on vessels, and it was not the usual practice to have a man aft to see that the boats had cleared. There was nothing special that might to warrant the master of the Irish Poplar taking any special precautions.

Captain P. F. Kelly, Harbour Master, Cork, said that the pilot launch was seaworthy, adequately manned and had sufficient lights. In boarding they adopted the proper procedure. Witness said he believed that any vessel such as the Irish Poplar coming into harbour should have an officer at the foc'sle, one on the bridge and a third on the gangway to receive the pilot. When the pilot and examination officer had boarded, the second officer should have gone aft and kept a look out to see that the boats were cleared. It was bad seamanship for the examination launch to come alongside the pilot boat.

Captain R. Murray, the Cork Deputy-Harbour Master, said that Horgan and Lynch were very satisfactory pilots. He thought an officer should have been detailed on the ship to see that the launches got clear.

Captain J. H. Webb, Commissioner of Irish Lights, and ex-Harbour Master, Dublin, said, in his opinion, the lights and crew on the pilot launch were adequate, and he saw no necessity for the use of a boat rope.

The inquiry was adjourned until to-day.

Two Bombers Believed Destroyed

South-East England's A.A. batteries, which 24 hours before broke up German bomber formations and forced the raiders so high that no military objective was hit, opened up with another terrific barrage last night, states a Press Association message, when more German 'planes crossed the coast. The raiders came in early in the night, and within a short time at least two were believed destroyed. One was seen enveloped in a red glow over the Thames Estuary, and the other, apparently, broke up over East Anglia.

London had a short "alert"—the third on successive nights and fifth of the week—but no raiders penetrated to the capital.

Murder Charge Fails

At a special court in Kilkenny yesterday, District Justice O'Shea returned George Moore, Dublin street, Carlow, for trial in custody on a charge of criminally assaulting Mrs. Bridget Walsh (45), Shraughaddy, Paulstown, Co. Kilkenny, who died in Kilkenny County Hospital on September 13th. Informations were refused on a charge of murder.

Dr. John McGrath, State Pathologist, who performed a post mortem examination, said that the body of Mrs. Walsh was in a state of extreme emaciation. He formed the opinion that death was due to chronic toxæmia. An assault or violence would have accelerated her death.

British Occupy Another Ægean Island

BRITISH forces, it was disclosed yesterday, have occupied the island of Symi, 40 miles south-east of Cos, in the Ægean, and have repulsed a German landing attempt.

An Allied communiqué from the Middle East, giving this news, states that heavy losses were inflicted on the Germans and prisoners were taken.

Of the fate of Cos there is no official Allied news, but Berlin stated last night that British prisoners captured there now total 886.

"Disarmed Badoglio troops number 3,000," said the German News Agency. "The transfer of all prisoners to the mainland has been concluded, and war equipment captured on the island has been removed to safety."

The agency also stated that two British cruisers, supported by destroyers, attacked a German convoy in the Ægean on Thursday, the attack continuing for nine hours. The agency claimed that two British cruisers were extensively damaged by German bombers off Rhodes.

BALKAN STRUGGLE

On the Balkan mainland Yugoslav units have captured the two Dalmatian towns of Livno and Kupres, cutting the main road running inland from Split, the biggest port on this coast, now again in German hands.

Livno is roughly 40 miles along this road through the Dinaric Alps, and Kupres, another 15 miles to the east. Their capture was disclosed in a special Yugoslav announcement last night reporting fresh gains on three fronts.

The partisans have also captured two towns—Varasdinske-Toplice, a few miles outside the big rail town of Varasdin,

Indigestion & FLATULENCE AFTER MEALS

The reason why you get that burning pain and distressing wind after meals is because your stomach is always too acid. It sours everything you eat. Food simply can't digest and your stomach is tortured in the attempt.

Why endure this mealtime misery when 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets will stop it this very day? They relieve acidity and sweeten a sour stomach at once. The stomach starts digesting your food right away and finishes its work with perfect ease. You feel nothing —no heartburn, no flatulence, not a twinge of your old stomach pain.

If you suffer from acute attacks of gastric pain 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets will stop them in five minutes. Try them to-day!

Obtainable everywhere 6d., 1/-, 2/- and 3/6.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Charlotte Mary Yonge

By Maurice James Craig

Charlotte Mary Yonge. By Georgina Battiscombe. London: Constable. 15/-.

IT would seem that only library officials and others professionally concerned with the circulation of books would have occasion to know just how widely read at this present moment are the novels of Miss Yonge. Her novels, as novels, are not normally taken seriously by criticism; and her life, as a story, is pronouncedly lacking in sensational elements. She was born in 1823 and died in 1901. During that long life so little happened to her that Mrs. Battiscombe's narrative is pitched in so quiet a key that a move to another house a few yards down the road stands out as an event. She is interesting now, because her period is beginning to become "period."

But as in her novels, so in her life, she only illustrates one aspect of her period—that of rural Tractarianism. In many of her novels the hero's confirmation is a dramatic turning-point. (Mrs. Battiscombe retails the pleasant story about the Laureate, a voracious novel-reader: "On Tennyson read, till I heard him cry with satisfaction, 'I see daylight! Mr. . . . is going to be confirmed.' ")

Similarly in Miss Yonge's own life, her confirmation by the great Keble is a crisis comparable to the marriages and journeyings of others. But not a turning-point: for Miss Yonge never turned. Embalmed, as her biographer admits, in an eternal childhood, Charlotte Yonge merely became more pronouncedly what she always was. And what, let her own words explain: "I have always viewed myself as a sort of instrument for popularising Church views"

Remote Recital

Considering that she has not even the opportunity of a first visit to London to meet her publisher (an event which usually adds a touch of drama to the lives of even the most retiring female novelist), Mrs. Battiscombe has made this remote recital extraordinarily readable. Even though we know that the Yonge family had military traditions, it is with a faint shock that we read that "She loved to discuss the Peninsular War and every detail of the battle of Waterloo as she had heard of it through her uncle, Lord Seaton." (Here the author is herself quoting an earlier authority.)

Her quotations from Miss Yonge's own works at times afford delight to the irreverent. A successful suitor apostrophises his umbrella after his acceptance:

"'Good luck to thee, umbrella!' said Percy, holding it on high ere closing it. 'Thy sea-green dome has been a canopy of bliss. Honour to thy whale-bones!'"

But Miss Yonge is clearly not another Amanda McKittrick Ros, and the author gives reason enough to persuade some temperaments to read her. Evidently her limitations are almost, but not quite, disastrous. And she makes a very convincing assessment of the almost unique quality of her piety, of which she says: "Perhaps there never was a religious woman who, with nothing of Martha about her, had at the same time so little kinship with Mary."

Unless one has ultimately some sympathy with Charlotte's religious ideals, she is hardly a profitable study. Mrs. Battiscombe has such a sympathy, even though she may reveal it only on the last page. This saves the book from triviality; but a reader without this minimum of common ground, would be in danger of relishing the story of Charlotte Yonge's life from motives of not altogether healthy antiquarianism. Interest in the past, and in past ways of thinking and feeling, on the score of their "quaintness," is a dangerous interest to indulge. Through no fault of its own, this book is all too likely to minister to such a taste.

Mr. Agate's Chronicles

Brief Chronicles. By James Agate. Jonathan Cape. 12/6 net.

DURING his twenty years' service with the Sunday Times, Mr. James Agate has made himself the best-known dramatic critic in England. His popularity is attested by the fact that he is the only English critic whose name is known—as is Nathan's in America—to thousands who have never been to a theatre or read a review; it is made still further manifest by the voracious public he has found for his Ego-biographies, so far to the number of five. One cannot help suspecting that his fame is due in part to a receipt learned from Mr. Bernard Shaw: he has made himself the enfant terrible of the English theatre. There the comparison ends. Shaw destroys, but he also creates.

In this book Mr. Agate is at his best; for he discards his trappings and shows himself naked and (as usual) unashamed as a dramatic critic. The volume is a collection of his notices on performances of Shakespeare's plays, from 1933 to 1943, designed to be of use to "any student wishing to know how Shakespeare fared in the London theatre between the two great wars." This is the justification for the inclusion of much matter which might otherwise be merely boring: remarks, not upon plays, but upon individual performances or productions, which have left no wrack but this behind. These passing judgments are of little interest to the ordinary reader, who is in no way anxious to know how Mr. Walter played Titus Andronicus in 1933 and what were the faults in Mr. Wolfit's make-up in 1930.

On more lasting points of production, however, Mr. Agate is interesting and intelligent — the music for the "Dream," modern dress, settings and so on. He is sound on the matter of cutting—he raps Mr. Tyrone Guthrie's knuckles for dropping the first witch scene from "Macbeth," but does not feel it necessary to stand alongside those who retain some dull passages purely on principle. Upon the plays themselves, while he does not claim to enter the field of Shakespearean exegesis, Mr. Agate is enlightening and entertaining. Whatever his faults, he knows his Shakespeare, he knows plays, and he knows the theatre. One can excuse a deal of posturing when he shows himself, as in this volume, undeniably a front-ranker in modern criticism.

A New Play

Golden Priest. By Aodh de Blacam. Dublin. Gill and Son. 2/6 net.

"GOLDEN PRIEST" is a three-act drama which deals with the life and martyrdom of Blessed Oliver Plunket. Naturally, there is a certain amount of dramatic license in regard to time and place, while some of the characters are imaginary; but, as a whole, the narrative is strictly in accord with historical fact, and no undue liberties have been taken. Mr. de Blacam has written a brilliant and readable play. The dialogue is first-rate, and the author's quick apprehension of dramatic situations ensures that the reader's attention can never flag.

Recent Poetry

By Austin Clarke

The Honeysuckle Hedge. By Shiela Steen. Oxford University Press. 5/- net.
Forty Poems. By John Lehmann. The Hogarth Press. 3/6 net.
The Angry Summer. By Idris Davies. Faber and Faber. 6/- net.
Beyond this Disregard. By John Pudney. John Lane. 2/6 net.

ALL the afternoon in some of the great London newspaper offices there is an underground rumble and vibration which seem to shake the entire building. Even in the small waiting rooms upstairs one can hear, against the sharp rattle and click of lift gates, the subdued thunder-sound of those printing machines in the basement. To some that rumbling rhythm must be an inspiration and an excitement, but it inflicted me always with a vague sense of impending doom. It was with difficulty that I managed to stammer some remark about the weather to busy literary editor or passing colleague. A young Belfast girl, who had some kind of secretarial post in the noisiest of these newspaper offices, asked me very diffidently one day to read some poems she had just written. Instead of the usual bulky pile of manuscripts which amateurs insist on producing from nowhere, she took a slim envelope from a drawer of a typewriting desk. I took the envelope with great depression, and fled from the rumble and roar of the printing rollers.

As soon as I was safely on a 'bus I glanced into the envelope, fearing the worst. There were only three poems in it. The first of them was prefaced by an extract from a newspaper report describing the discovery of the foundations of an old Roman bridge in the River Rhone following an unusual fall in the level of the waters. The first two were startling and unexpected—

He carried three mint-green waves
At brow, breast and knee . . .

For one illogical moment; as the 'bus moved down Fleet street I caught a glimpse of Poseidon, or it may have been one of his attendant Tritons. The poem described the crossing of the river by Roman cohorts in ancient times.

Within the thickening waters
Rode roof-top, root and isle,
And stained dead swans, and salmon
Stunned by the steep bridge-pile;
And across the east a tempest,
And across the vines a wind . . .

The next poem, "Abyssus Abyssum Invocat," brought me to the Persian Gulf.

In half a bow-shot from the sea
Stands a house of timber,
With carven columns tall and three-(Call forth the camel-men: for we Shall meet this vessel riding).

The pomecitrons and the pools
Round the Persian castle
Divert the prophets and the fools.
(Have care, my bride, that white wine cools
For these strange guests abiding).

And this romantic ballad with its elaborate rhyme moved forward vigorously for sixty stanzas. At a time when so many younger poets felt constrained to write entirely on political and social problems, it was surprising to come on this strain of delighted and protesting romanticism. But the poetic gift is unpredictable, and, as often as not, goes by contraries. The poems I have mentioned will be found in Miss Shiela Steen's first book of poems, just published by the Oxford University Press. Not all the poems are equal, indeed. There are weak lines, conventional phrases and inversions—the price one must pay for traditionalism before one has learned how to blend cunningly the new and old. But there is a striking individuality in all these poems and a strength that is rare in the first work of a young writer. Take, for instance, "The Beginning of Winter":—

Snowclouds roll overpolished pleats of ploughland;
Birdclouds thrill up from holly and bullace
With melodies shrill and wings that the boughs embrace.
While country candelabra—hemlocks, thistles—
Hold up their frozen light into your face.
Knives have so sharply sliced these noble furrows
They glitter as their earth were under glass.
Our steps fetch up chill music from the grass . . .
Husband—a dream-sleek heron haunts this meadow;
As if he listened for my heart's
"Alas."

Anyone who has watched new furrows in the morning light will recognise the accuracy of the image in the seventh line of that poem.

Mr. John Lehmann has reacted in his own way from the intellectual din of contemporary verse. No doubt his serenity is deliberate; and there are times when his cautious traditional lines seem sedate. But it is difficult in these years to remind oneself that quiet river reaches and old-world gardens still exist.

Archer of the sun, still aiming through the pears,
With shell-like helmet on your leaden curls,
A leaden shaft that never leaves the bow
Still levelled at the West, beside your pool,
The yellow flags have shrivelled . . .

There is another mood in some of these poems, the uneasy mood which one finds in the early work of Eliot and Auden. But Mr. Lehmann has his own individual symbolism for that uneasy searching of the mind.

Sometimes I'm near,
But draughts puff out the matches and I'm lost.
Sometimes I'm lucky, find a key to turn,
Open an inch or two—but always then
A bell rings, someone calls, or cries of "fire"
Arrest my hand when nothing's known or seen.
And running down the stairs again
I mourn.

"The Angry Summer," by Idris Davies brings us back with a shock of recollection to the strikes and industrial disputes of 1926. But the poems do not realise the promise shown in this Welsh writer's previous book, "Gwalia Deserta." The jingling lines seem too light and trivial for the indignation and misery which they carry. One feels that the writer is groping for a folk tradition of balladry and has not been able to find it.

"Beyond this Disregard," war poems, by John Pudney, show the same search for some kind of popular tradition. But Mr. Pudney fails where Kipling succeeded—perhaps because there is too much sophistication behind the apparent simplicity. In some of the more elaborate poems the writer uses that species of euphemism against which Wilfrid Owen and Siegfried Sassoon protested more than a quarter of a century ago.

THE ILEX GROVE

By SHIELA STEEN

I PACE beside the ilex grove
In classic trouble of lost love;
Though love were scarce the word to use—
Little to have and less to lose—
But what can we call it, other than this,
When a man and a woman meet, and kiss,
Quarrel, and part? And quarrel again?
. . . . The rustling ilexes sound like rain:
They grow on a wall-encircled mound,
And the outer branches brush the ground.
Love, or hate?—the rustlings cease . . . .
A silence, as in primal Greece,
Halts the shadows: purplish where
The handsome red-jay has his lair,
Beaten silver and marcassite
Twixt grotesque trunks, where this dark retreat
Lets in the winter sun: I see
Hoofmarks round an ilex tree.
Now the noise again begins . . .
The long wave on the white shore thins
With a delicate hissing down to foam
And then curls back to its mighty home.
Tide, tide . . . wind, wind . . .
All in these foreign trees confined;
What do they here, so to enmesh
With cynic memories not of flesh
One who seeks but to be free?
I hark their whispering harmony:
Shiver to hear nor dare repeat
The rhythm I know their branches beat. . .
"O love were scarce the word to use,
Nothing to have and nothing to lose—
Nor man, nor woman, but beings other
In eoan lands who lie together."

Miscellaneous

The Adventures of the Young Soldier in Search of the Better World. By C. E. M. Joad. Faber and Faber. 6/- net.

WHILE his mission is different, the Young Soldier has a journey like that of Shaw's "Black Girl." He meets creatures symbolic of trades unionism, communism, religion, conservatism and many other forces which have plans for the better world after the war. Dr. Joad borrows freely from the speeches and literature of those forces, but, in a spirit of fun, he introduces a great deal of himself. Possibly it was in that spirit that he brought in something of Mr. Aldous Huxley's "Brave New World." The Young Soldier finds his most useful guide in Dr. Joad himself, whose final signpost to the better world is "the revival of man's spiritual life."

Gold From The Sea. By James Taylor. Harrap: 10/6 net.

In June, 1940, the R.M.S. Niagara, bound for Vancouver with 2½ million pounds worth of bullion shipped at Sydney to the order of the Bank of England, struck a German mine 28 miles out of Auckland, New Zealand, in the Hauraki Gulf, and went to the bottom 70 fathoms below. A few months later Captain T. P. Williams, of Melbourne, recovered, in 24 working days, 94 per cent. of the lost metal. The recovery of so much of the gold was an outstanding feat. Yet, although Mr. James Taylor, the only newspaperman on the job, produced a most interesting account of the work and the trials which it imposed, the book is not quite adequate to the achievement in dramatic quality. Nevertheless, it is very readable, and free from confusing technical detail.

How Sleep the Brave. By Flying-Officer X. Jonathan Cape. 2/6 net.

Those who like flying stories—the real stuff, not romantic fancy—should be impressed by this slight volume, written by the author of "The Greatest People in the World." For the greater part his tales deal with hardship, suffering and excitement, with quite ordinary fellows behaving as quite ordinary fellows have shown that they do behave in the face of death.

A Model Training College

Organisation. By H. Kingsmill Moore, D.D. Dundalk: Dundalgan Press. 7/6 net.

THE Church of Ireland Training College in Kildare Place, Dublin, to all the teachers who have passed from it, and all who have been associated with its professional and educational work, is regarded as a monument to the arduous, self-denying labours of Dr. H. Kingsmill Moore. For close on half a century he was its principal, working with ceaseless energy to promote the efficiency of the institution, and make it in architecture, internal features, and scientific scope, a model of its kind.

In this booklet, Dr. Kingsmill Moore tells the story of how the outstanding enterprise of his life was accomplished. With a deep-seated confidence in the value and necessity of organisation, he narrates the experiences that opened the way for the fruition of the work to which he enthusiastically devoted himself. His early years after ordination saw him busily occupied in organising church choir festivals, and subsequently in obtaining the funds wherewith to erect the memorial to the illustrious Bishop Berkeley of Cloyne.

From the time of his taking up his post in the College, his organising abilities were systematically devoted to the effective supervision of every phase of its work. All the plans and activities that he set on foot to realise his ambition are described by Dr. Kingsmill Moore, with a zest which all acquainted with his personality will appraise.

The Bell

The Bell, October, 1943.—The Bell has departed far from its original billing as a "magazine of creative fiction"; but the change is in no way a decline. It continues to supply a great deal of valuable documentary matter on Irish life, and to offer almost the only uncensored field for the Irish writer. The current issue is notable for an analysis of the income and expenditure of a family "on the dole," and an article on "Mistress versus Maid"; among many other items, it includes Roibeard O Fearachain's Personal Anthology. (1/6 net.)

Old Regimes : Spain and China

The Track. By Arturo Barea. London: Faber and Faber, 10/6 net.
The Autobiography of a Chinese Girl. By Hsieh Ping-Ying. London: Allen and Unwin. 12/6 net.

THESE two books fall very easily into the same classification; they are both translations, they both tell of life under old régimes—régimes which led eventually to revolution—and they are both well written.

"The Track," translated by Ilsa Barea, from the original Spanish of Arturo Barea, author of "The Forge," tells of life in the Spanish Army during the Moroccan campaign, in the years following the last world war. It is a picture of large-scale corruption, a corruption that ran through the entire Spanish Army from the newest recruit to the most eminent general, a picture of fraudulence, chasing and common theft, with public funds regarded as fair game for any dishonest practice.

Hsieh Ping-Yiug's autobiography translated from the Chinese by Tsui Chi, tells the tale of open rebellion to the standards and traditions of a remote village in China. The struggle between her mother, whose one preoccupation was to bind her daughter's feet as small as possible, prepare her trousseau and find a husband for her; and the author herself, who wanted to go to school, to join the Socialist Army, to devote her life to the cause of Liberty, and find for herself a career other than marriage is clearly and engrossingly recounted. More interesting still is the background of old China, with its superstitions, its conventions, its hidebound traditions; many Western readers will find it difficult to understand that such conditions of slavery existed in an enlightened country like China as late as the nineteen-twenties.

Books in Brief

Living in Caves. By B. G. Hardingham. London: Nelson, 4/6 net.

Caves always have a great fascination for children, who like to imagine that every cave at one time housed a smuggler; the truth about caves may be less romantic, but it is just as interesting. In an excellent little volume for young people Mr. B. G. Hardingham gives a complete history of caves in all countries from the earliest habitations of the cave-dwellers to the air-raid shelters of to-day.

America and Britain. A Mutual Introduction. By Maurice Colbourne. London: Dent, 9/- net.

This is an attempt—by an Englishman, born and bred, to quote the book itself—to reconcile the English and American points of view regarding a number of important issues, including the British Empire, and what he is pleased to call the American Empire. It contains, among other things, the text of the Gettysburg Address.

Opera Tunes to Remember. By Florence M. Clark. London: Nelson, 3/6 net.

This little book, which contains outlines of the opera stories, extracts from the principal airs and motifs in each opera, and a list of the best gramophone recordings of them, would make an excellent introduction to opera. In Dublin such an introduction hardly would be needed.

Mountaineering Memories

Mountain Jubilee. By Arnold Lunn. London: Eyre and Spottiswoode. 15/- net.

MR. Arnold Lunn has written prolifically on many subjects from auction piquet to Communism; but mountains—with the kindred topics of climbing and skiing—and religion have been his main themes. It is a natural alliance: In the high spaces—

"Only the mightier movement sounds and passes,
Only winds and rivers,
Life and death."

and to men of very diverse outlooks and beliefs the mountains have brought a message and a conviction of the supernatural. In this book Mr. Lunn records his debt to many ranges—Pennine, Pyrenees, Andes, and especially his beloved Alps—in a series of autobiographical studies. He tells how on a mountain pass overlooking the Rhine valley his growing belief in materialism was swept away by a sudden realisation of a sacramental beauty underlying the visible beauty of the landscape, and, in a later chapter, attempts to analyse Alpine mysticism in terms of religion and philosophy. But the whole book is an unconscious commentary on the effect of mountains upon character, more illuminating than the thesis: in one incident or another it becomes clear how the author's sense of beauty grew, and perfected under the influence of the peaks, how his courage and determination were hardened by his struggles with ice and storm, and how his almost reckless loyalty to his friends had its first origins on the climbing rope. But there is one quality in this book to which, I think, the mountains have contributed nothing—its ever-present humour; for mountains are humorless.

Before the war broke out the growing tension between the nations had invaded the world of sport, and a victory in the Olympic Games was hailed as irrefutable proof of the validity of a politico-national theory. For long ski-ing, under control of the F.I.S., kept apart from controversies other than its own private disagreements as to whether downhill slalom racing should be given a place with the classical "lang lauf" and jumping events; but eventually a quarrel between the F.I.S. and the Olympic Committee (then controlled by Germany) was to the definition of amateur status made the politicians aki-conscious and started a campaign of manœuvre and intrigue in which the F.I.S. and Mr. Lunn were victorious.

The Golden Age

But the damage had been done. Ski-ing had become a burden and not a relaxation. The Golden Age had passed when people skied for the fun of it and races were run under rules elaborated in the course of the descent. Luckily Mr. Lunn, one of the pioneers, has remained to tell the tale and even people who do not know the difference between a binding and a stem-turn should enjoy the chapters which tell the exploits of the men and women who made the sport, and of its development and perfection. Others, who have never seen the first sun rimming the rock row or a circle of mountains standing ebony and silver under the moon, will be stirred by the descriptions of mountain scenery to a resolve, if ever the bright days return, to go and behold for themselves what the Alps have to show. And everyone will enjoy the company of an author so simple and genuine in outlook, so super-charged with enthusiasm, so fearless and full of hope.

The seventeen full-page photographs of mountains, lakes, snow and ski-ing require special mention. They are all very lovely—and oh! so nostalgic.

LAY AWAKE IN AGONY WITH NEURITIS

Spent Sleepless Nights Tossing With Pain

Kruschen Salts Effected a Complete Cure

Ordinary headaches are bad enough, but they are as nothing compared to the awful pains of neuritis in the head, says this woman. Read how Kruschen completely banished the pain:—

"I had neuritis in the head and right arm. I suffered untold agony with my head, and I dare not think what might have happened had it continued. Everybody knows what a headache is like, but it is as nothing compared with the awful pain of neuritis in the head. I spent sleepless nights tossing with pain. I began taking Kruschen Salts, and after some months of the treatment I have effected a complete cure."—(Mrs.) L.M.

Neuritis, like rheumatism and sciatica, has its roots in intestinal stasis (delay)—the unsuspected accumulation in the system of harmful waste matter, which leads to the formation of excess uric acid. The knife-edged crystals of uric acid pierce the tissues and nerve sheaths, and cause those excruciating pains.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients of Kruschen assist Nature to expel these dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

Kruschen Salts is sold by all Chemists, price 1/9 per bottle.

'Dog Was Always Drowsy'
"My spaniel Bogey, just turned 6 years, had got very old and drowsy; but Bob Martin's have worked wonders. He is so alert now, looks years younger and is in good condition."
—Mrs. C. M.

If your dog lies around listlessly, don't make the mistake of thinking he's getting lazy. Listlessness is the result of blood disorder caused by eating cooked and prepared foods which are not a dog's natural diet. The one sure way of purifying your dog's blood-stream is by giving him Bob Martin's Condition Powders. These famous powders contain the essential blood correctives which the primitive dog found in certain rare wild grasses and herbs. Now that autumn is here, bringing shorter days and uncertain weather, all dogs are handicapped by loss of exercise. Regular conditioning with Bob Martin's—one a day—is therefore more necessary than ever. This simple care will counteract irregularities of exercise and feeding, and make your dog a 'plus' dog — fit, friendly, and full of spirits. Start conditioning now! You can get Bob Martin's in packets, 6d. and 1/-, from all chemists and corn merchants.

Smokers' Fur

How to detect it— How to prevent it

Try this now. Run your tongue round your mouth—do you notice it . . . a rough, woolly feeling? Smokers' fur has got a hold, and is staining your teeth. But don't worry, you can stop this fur from ruining the look of your teeth.

Dentists know smokers' fur is caused by excess acid in the mouth. Kill the acid and you shift the fur. 12,000 dentists say 'Milk of Magnesia' tablets as an antacid is the most effective antacid known. They recommend smokers to use the toothpaste containing Milk of Magnesia'—the only toothpaste containing it — Phillips' Dental Magnesia.

Get a tube now and clean your teeth with it. Then you'll feel the difference; no more morning mouth; no more stale breath. Instead you'll have teeth which look clean, feel clean, are clean; a sweet mouth to give new zest to smoking. 7½d., 1/1d. and 1/10½d. Return Empty Tubes to Chemist. Sold everywhere.

PHILLIPS' DENTAL MAGNESIA

★ 'Milk of Magnesia' is the trade mark of Phillips' preparation of Magnesia

She's getting CARRAGOL again . . .

Lucky girl! She won't "catch anything" this winter, for this renowned tonic emulsion builds up her resistance. Carragol is more plentiful now, so you may get some, too. From chemists, 1/3, 2/6, 4/-.

★ Please return the jar and the cap to your chemist — they can't be replaced.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES.

EMERGENCY POWERS (SERVICE TEXTILE ARTICLES) ORDER, 1943. The Department of Defence invites attention to the terms of the Emergency Powers (Service Textile Articles) Order, 1943, which has been made by the Minister for Defence. The Order makes it an offence for any person, except under and in accordance with a permit issued by or on behalf of the Minister for Defence, to dye or receive for dyeing any service textile article or any article which he has reasonable grounds or believing is a service textile article or a converted service textile article. It also prohibits the conversion of a service textile article into any other article or the receiving of a service textile article for the purpose of such conversion. The expression "service textile article" is defined in the Order as meaning any article of a textile nature issued to or for the use of members of the Defence Forces, the Local Defence Force, or an air-raid precautions service, and the expression "converted service textile article" as a service textile article which has been converted into another article. It should be particularly noted that dyers and cleaners, tailors, etc., may not, without a permit, receive articles to which the Order applies—e.g., uniforms, clothing, blankets, etc.—for the purposes of dyeing or of conversion into other articles. The Order is on sale and may be purchased direct from the Government Publications Sale Office, 3-4 College Street, Dublin, or through any bookseller. The public is also warned— (a) that under the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, it is an offence to buy, exchange, take in pawn or receive from any person, on any pretence whatsoever, any military clothing, equipment, bedding or stores, and (b) that under the Emergency Powers (No. 37) Order, 1940, it is an offence to be in unauthorised possession of uniforms or components of uniforms of inter alia, the Defence Forces, Local Defence Force, and Air Raid Precautions Service. Persons who commit breaches of the Act and Orders mentioned render themselves liable to very severe penalties on conviction. Department of Defence. October, 1943. W.H.Co. C 7713.

HOUSING (MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS) ACT, 1931. WHEREAS in pursuance of Section 11 of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1931, the Limerick Corporation has made, and submitted to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health for his approval, an Order providing for the purchase of certain lands described in the Schedule hereto: AND WHEREAS objections to the said Order have been made to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health by persons interested: NOW THEREFORE the Minister for Local Government and Public Health hereby gives notice that he has instructed his Inspector, Mr. M. J. Scott, B.E., to hold a Public Local Inquiry as to the propriety of approving the said Order and to report to him thereon; and the said Mr. M. J. Scott will attend at the Town Hall, Limerick, on Tuesday, 12th October, 1943, at the hour of 11 o'clock a.m. to make inquiry accordingly. SCHEDULE. The plot of ground in the Parish of Saint Munchin and City of Limerick bounded on the East by Clancy's Strand on the West by Goggin's Lane, on the North by Mass Lane and number one Clancy's Strand, and on the South partly by premises in Clancy's Strand, Goggin's Lane, Clune's Lane and Laneway off Clune's Lane and including the sites of the former dwelling-houses numbers 2 to 11 Clancy's Strand (both inclusive), Nos. 1 to 4 Clune's Lane (both inclusive) numbers 6 to 8 Clune's Lane (both inclusive), numbers 1 to 3 (both inclusive) in lane off Clune's Lane, Nos. 2 to 3 Goggin's Lane (both inclusive), and numbers 1 to 4 Mass Lane (both inclusive). By Order of the Minister, J. HURSON, Runai. Department of Local Government and Public Health, Custom House, Dublin. October, 1943. W.H.Co. C 7668.

EXCHANGE OF UNEMPLOYMENT BOOKS AND WET-TIME, 1943. The Minister for Industry and Commerce desires to call the attention of employers and insured persons to the fact that the 1942/43 insurance year terminated on the 3rd October, 1943, and that Unemployment Books and Wet-Time Books current up to that date must be exchanged for new books during the week ending 9th October, 1943. Employers should communicate immediately with the nearest Employment Exchange or Branch Employment Office of the Department of Industry and Commerce, if they have not already done so, respecting the special facilities available in this connection. A number of insured persons are required to hold both Unemployment Books and Wet-Time Books. It is important in such cases that both should be presented together for exchange. Employers in the Dublin Area whose business premises are located north of the River Liffey should communicate with the Employment Exchange, Lower Gardiner street, and employers whose business premises are located south of the River Liffey should communicate with the Employment Exchange, Werburgh Street. C 7705. W.H.Co.

AN ROINN TALMHAIDHEACHTA. EMERGENCY POWERS (CEREALS) ORDER (FIRST AMENDMENT) ORDER, 1943. The above-mentioned Order which was made by the Minister for Agriculture on the 7th October, 1943, amends the provisions of the Emergency Powers (Cereals) Order, 1943, relating to the price which may be charged on the re-sale of barley by a licensed barley dealer, by making provision for an addition to that price of a limited charge in respect of the carriage of the barley to the licensed dealer's premises. The Order also amends Article 47 of the Emergency Powers (Cereals) Order, 1943, by empowering Inspectors to demand additional information from persons engaged in the milling of Cereals. This Order will be placed on sale without delay and copies may be purchased from the Government Publications Sale Office, 3/4 College street, Dublin, or through any bookseller. D. TWOMEY, Secretary. 8th October, 1943. W.H.Co. C 7720.

ROINN COSANTA. (Department of Defence.) TALLAGHT AERODROME LANDS. LANDS TO LET FOR TILLAGE. TENDERS are invited for the Letting for Tillage purposes of that portion of Tallaght Aerodrome Lands situated to the North of the new carriage-way leading to the Dublin Corporation Reservoir, comprising an area of 81 acres approximately. The letting will be for a period of 5 years—from the 1st November, 1943, and the successful tenderer will be required to complete a written form of agreement. The lands must be laid down in grass seed on the expiration of the lease. The highest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted. The Lands may be inspected on application to:— Mr. Thomas Peppard, Land Steward, Cookstown, Tallaght. Tenders, which must be in writing, should be addressed to:— The Secretary, Department of Defence (S.2), Parkgate, Dublin, so as to reach the Department before noon on Friday, 15th October, 1943. C 7720. W.H.Co.

EMERGENCY POWERS (MOLASSED SUGAR BEET PULP) (MAXIMUM PRICES) ORDER, 1943. Notice is hereby given that the Minister for Supplies has made an Order, entitled Emergency Powers (Molassed Sugar Beet Pulp) (Maximum Prices) Order, 1943. The Order, which revokes the Emergency Powers (Control of Prices) (No. 108) Order, 1942 (S.R. & O., No. 36 of 1942), fixes the maximum price at which Molassed Sugar Beet Pulp may be sold at seven pounds per ton, plus the cost of delivery from any of the railway sidings or stores of Comhlucht Siuicre Eireann Teo. situated at Carlow, Mallow, Thurles and Tuam. Copies of the Order, which will be on sale shortly, may be obtained from the Government Publication Sales Office, 3-4 College Street, Dublin, or through any bookseller. JOHN LEYDON, Secretary. Department of Supplies, Dublin. 8th October, 1943. W.H.Co. C 7720.

Capua and Termoli

Two thousand years ago the troops of the great Carthaginian general, Hannibal, having carried fire and sword through Italy, wintered at the city of Capua. That sojourn, according to the Roman historians, was Hannibal's undoing; for the luxury of Capua so enervated his soldiers that nothing went well for Carthage afterwards. The air of Capua today must be very far from enervating: the city has become a battleground in a greater war than even the Roman Republic ever knew. Two days ago the Fifth American Army, under the command of General Mark Clark, in the course of its northward drive from Naples, took possession of Capua, and now faces Marshal Kesselring's forces across the narrow Volturno River. In effect, the Volturno is the only natural line of resistance between Naples and Rome; for the even smaller river, the Gariliano—to which the Germans are expected to retire if the Allies succeed in dislodging them from their present position—is even less capable of assistance in a prolonged defence. All the signs are that Marshal Kesselring is making every possible use of whatever advantages he may possess. He is confronted with an attacking army which has extended its front to include the river's southern bank from Capua to the sea, a distance of seventeen miles, and he is opposing its Romeward advance with every obstacle in his power. Meanwhile, General Montgomery, on the other side of the Apennines, has reached the latitude of Rome—from which, however, he still is separated by the formidable range of mountains. Early this week he effected a "surprise" landing at Termoli, on the Adriatic, and this morning's reports suggest that his position there is being consolidated against fierce opposition. According to Captain Sertorius, the German Army's official commentator, General Montgomery has increased his pressure, and the bulk of the Eighth Army has "linked up" with the troops that established the original bridgehead in the neighbourhood of Termoli. The weather has become a factor of the first importance. There is mention of "blinding rain," and of low cloud that forbids the British and Americans to make use of their aircraft in what has become the conventional technique of this war. As yet, however, nobody may dare speculate on the immediate outcome of the campaign. It seems improbable that the German resistance on the banks of the Volturno is anything more than a delaying action, fought with the object of consolidating resistance somewhere considerably farther towards the north. The coming week ought to provide a clear indication of Marshal Kesselring's tactics. He is bound to be influenced by events outside his immediate sphere of action—by the fact, for example, that the Allied occupation of Corsica has given General Eisenhower a base for possible landings in the rear of the forces defending Southern Italy. German comment already foresees the chance of an Allied descent on the western coast substantially to the north of the present scene of operations, and nobody who takes the trouble to study a map of Italy can doubt that the thought has occurred to General Eisenhower. All the omens are that the real German defence will be concentrated where everybody expected it to be—in the valley of the Po.

The Domestic Servant

In the current issue of The Bell, there is published a most interesting article on the subject of domestic servants. "The servant problem" is one which engages the attention of the Press at frequent intervals, and that of the public at all times. On the one hand, housewives complain that it is impossible to secure satisfactory domestic servants — or, indeed, any at all—for the wages which they can afford to pay. On the other hand, girls refuse to enter domestic service, because there are no established wages or conditions of work. In Ireland, at least, comparatively few families are in a position to employ more than one servant. In a household which employs several servants, a suitable division of labour usually can be agreed upon; the routine of work is fairly well established, and living conditions for the maids are, as a general rule, superior to those in small establishments. The problem here, however, is, in essence, the problem of the one-servant household. In such a household a relationship exists between mistress and servant which has no parallel in any other form of employment. The work to be done is the only measure of the maid's duties; often even her one afternoon off is encroached upon because there are odd jobs for her to do. Some mistresses appear to think, says one of the servants interviewed by the writer in The Bell, that, when they pay a girl ten shillings a week, they own her, body and soul. Some of them make their servants work, from early morning to late at night, as if they were mere beasts of burden; privacy is a privilege, rather than a right; food, room, hours, wages and treatment in general vary according to the whim of the employer. Domestic servants now are making the reasonable claim that their working conditions shall be standardised. They ask for a 56-hour-week, with two half-days and every evening free after eight o'clock, and they demand that the legislation which entitles them to two weeks' holiday with pay every year shall be enforced. Employers, while they recognise that it is only fair that a maid should have certain rights, point out that there are two sides to the question; it is not a simple affair of oppressors and oppressed. If the maid is to have every evening free, the master and mistress — in a house where there are young children—are prevented from going out at night at all. Representatives of the employers are prepared to offer a 70-hour week, giving the maid every second night off. More important, however, is the point that, while a mistress is being asked to offer guaranteed conditions of employment, she is offered in turn no guaranteed standard of efficiency. Negotiations cannot reasonably be carried on as long as any girl may take advantage of the mistresses' concessions, while she herself has no qualifications or previous training. Indeed, housewives are asked to train girls themselves—to take them as apprentices, as it were—under the same conditions that are laid down to govern the case of trained and experienced servants. The various continuation schools and the technical schools offer a training at a very modest fee, but few girls avail themselves of it as a preliminary to the search for employment. Unless the Servants' Union can arrange for the establishment of some sort of institute, which would give girls a short, but necessary, training, and would assure a certain standard of efficiency, it is seeking to create a fixed market price for goods without any assurance of their quality.

CRUISKEEN LAWN

By Myles na gCopaleen

I HAD a strange experience the other week-end. I happened to be crossing the city of Dublin carrying an attaché case. There I was—urbane, inoffensive, European, going about my lawful occasions. To be precise I was off to spend the week-end with Glenavy; I am determined to get a decision one way or another on the question of the thermic syphons and thinking to kill two birds with one stone, I had brought also along the new fire-box drawings every one of them O.K'd by M. Chapelon's widow, who is staying with the mother in Ferns. Well, an extraordinary thing happened. First of all I noticed that hundreds of other people were walking about the streets carrying bags. Next thing dozens of urchins and ladies in shawls began to accost me. Some appeared to be selling small coloured rags while others seemed to be retailing lottery tickets—the prize being, of all things, a match. Heavens knows matches are scarce—Maguire kindly sends me a dozen boxes per week, being under a small obligation to me—but the raffling of single matches savours strongly of a black market ramp and it is a thing that the Department of Home Affairs of the Free State Southern Ireland Government should look into. Needless to say, I bought no ticket for the match nor did I purchase any rags, importunate and persistent as the vendors were. The explanation of all this I received afterwards from a friend. It seems that some decent rugby players from Cavan and Roscomyn were playing a match in Daly mount Park on the following Sunday, that there was a large number of country visitors in the city for the occasion, and that any person seen carrying a bag was assumed to be one of them. Well well It is not clear to me why these footballers should not play their game in either Roscomyn or Cavin since they presumably live in those districts—though it well may be that they have no suitable field there. What does rather astonish me, though, is the sale of the small rags, which (I have this on the authority of my friend) were "county emblems" and were worn by the respective natives of Roscomyn and Cavon to indicate to the public where they were born. This seems to me quite incomprehensible. Folk customs are of course interesting—Delargy and I have gone into the whole matter very thoroughly elsewhere—but the importation of the ageless technique of folk festivals to a modern urban scene such as is afforded by our capital city seems to me to be a departure from the usage of the ethnic categories in which our peasants subsist. The Government would do well to promote research into this matter, as I am not satisfied that we have yet dispersed all the shadows in the sphere of goidelic anthropology.

But leaving aside the scientific aspect of the question, it interests me that any person—even a depressed agricultural type—should advertise the fact that he is "from" Cavin. It is one of the meanest "counties" in Ireland, topographically atrocious, and though the peasants are industrious, they pursue an ignorant and brutal agriculture The mere Gaelic word cabhán, as Dr. Dinneen informs us, means "a lasting injury, an affliction" and the lexicographer adds the phrase tá cabhán ort, "you are ruined forever." As for Roscomyn, what can one say only that it is, with the possible exception of Cork, the most undistinguished "county" in Ireland—men sullen and stone-faced, children decrepit, women slatternly. It is not a place for which there can be any possible excuse but 'twere unfair to neglect to add this—that there is a neighbouring nest of townlands known as Langford (I think) — an arid insanitorium peopled by thullabauns and custard-visaged dogs. I do not "follow" hockey or know to what extent Langford inhabitants find pretexts for coming to our mild Georgian Dublin but in justice it must be said that I have never met any man who admitted he was from Langford. Had I been born there myself, I would have hastily repaired the humiliation by taking my life.

Another thing I cannot understand is why these people play football in an arena announced on posters as Páirc an Croquet.

SEAMEN'S RISKS IN WAR-TIME

"In spite of the perils of the high seas, shipping must go on," said the Consul-General for Sweden, M. Nils L. Jaenson, performing the opening ceremony yesterday at the Annual Gift Day and Sale in aid of the Missions to Seamen (Dublin Station).

Now, during a war, cruel without parallel in the history of mankind, the seaman's life has a thousand-fold more risks," continued M. Jaenson. Up to April last 500,000 tons of Swedish shipping, not less than 25 per cent. of the Swedish Merchant Fleet as it was in 1939, had been lost through reasons directly due to the war, and 1,133 lives, of which 788 were Swedish, had been lost.

The fact that in Ireland people were able to enjoy a life not too far removed from normal was due to the brave men of the sea, he said.

The Archbishop of Dublin, Most Rev. Dr. Barton, who presided, contrasted the conditions of sailors in the old days of sailing ships and at the present time, and said that the improved conditions to-day were due to two main factors; firstly, the courageous fight by certain Trades Union leaders, and, secondly, the influence of societies like the Missions to Seamen.

A vote of thanks to the speakers was proposed by Alderman Ernest Benson, T.D., and seconded by the Rev. J. E. C. Lawlor (Chaplain for Ireland).

Also present were the British Representative in Eire, Sir John Maffey; the Swiss Minister, M. Charles J. Benziger; the Consul-General for the Netherlands, Mynheer I. R. A. W. Weenink; the Yugoslav Consul, Mr. Victor G. Davey, and Madame de Laforcade.

Among the many stalls, "Ye Olde Country Shoppe" attracted numerous purchasers, and during the afternoon musical selections were rendered by Miss Bay Jellett and Miss Eileen Doyle.

A concert given by well-known Dublin artists provided an additional attraction in the evening.

Women Appellants in New Law Term Cases

A HIGH Court jury's verdict in a ten days' action that was described by the trial judge as unusual, will form the subject of one of the thirty-one appeals listed for hearing by the Supreme Court during the Michaelmas Law Term, which will open next Monday.

The appeal is by Mrs. Kathleen G. Lefroy, Dundrum, County Dublin, President of the Dublin Branch of the Parents' National Educational Union (P.N.E.U.), from judgment for £375 given against her in an action of Glen Ban, Limited, South Frederick street, Dublin, owners of Glen Ban School, Abbeyleix, who had alleged that malicious falsehoods were contained in a circular, stated to have been sent to parents resulting in the withdrawal of children from the school.

Another woman appellant—stated to have been the only woman member of the Dublin Stock Exchange—is Mrs. Oona Irene Giltsoff, Hambridge, Taunton, Somerset. She is appealing from a judgment of the High Court dismissing her action against the Hibernian Bank, Limited, in which she claimed a declaration that they held certain shares on trust for her, and an order for the return of the shares.

NUN'S INCOME TAX

Yet another appeal by a woman raises an important issue on assessment to income tax. Sister Margaret M. Kelly, of the Order of St. Louis, a national school teacher, teaching at Rathmines, had been assessed to income tax, and on appeal the assessment had been discharged by the Circuit Court. A special case had been stated for the opinion of the High Court, whether the Circuit Judge had been right in holding that she was not liable to income tax as the holder of an office or employment of profit.

A case stated by the President of the High Court for the opinion of the Supreme Court asks whether he had been right, when awarding compensation to Mrs. Annie O'Brien, Thomond House, Ballyboden road, Dublin, for the death of her husband, Detective-Sergeant Denis O'Brien, in deducting from the gross sum to be awarded the value of the assets left by the detective-sergeant to his widow; and whether, in addition to the actual pecuniary loss suffered by Mrs. O'Brien by the death of her husband, he was also entitled to make an award covering general damages.

Commander Wilfred G. S. Tighe, Rosannagh Cottage, Rathnew, County Wicklow, is appealing from a judgment of the High Court, the effect of which was that because he did not know in time of the death of his cousin, Francis K. Tighe, he had lost real estate in Eire valued at £6,681, and a gift of £5,000.

He had brought a summons to construe a clause in his cousin's will, requiring him to give written notice to the Public Trustee within three months after the death of Francis, of his agreement to accept the property on trusts contained in the will.

Francis Tighe, who was a Second Lieutenant in the British Army, had gone with the Expeditionary Force to France in 1940, and before going he made his will, leaving this property to Commander Tighe, and £5,000; and the difficulty had arisen because it was not until February 21, 1941, that the War Office reported him as having been killed in action about June 5, 1940. Commander Tighe accepted the gift within a month of his hearing of Lieutenant Tighe's death, but not within the time specified in the will, and the trial judge held that he must interpret the condition in the will strictly in accordance with Lieutenant Tighe's intention, and that, as Commander Tighe had not complied with the condition, his claim failed.

THE HIGH COURT

A great volume of business in the High Court will consist in certiorari motions. Already there are 32 motions to make absolute conditional orders of certiorari to bring to the High Court for the purpose of being quashed report of the Referee appointed under the Military Service Pensions Act, 1934, refusing the claims of applicants for military service pensions. It is understood that 12,000 claims will be affected by the decision in these cases.

On the Chancery side there are 28 jury actions and 29 non-jury actions. Of the non-jury cases, two are for damages for alleged breach of promise of marriage and two are matrimonial petitions.

The jury trials will not begin until November 1.

Forging Cheque Withdrawn.—Charles Corr (47) was given the benefit of the Probation Act by District Justice Mangan in Dolin yesterday, when he pleaded guilty to obtaining £7/12/6 by false pretence from a city publican. Charges of forging and uttering a cheque were withdrawn.

Arsenic Found in Plaster, Says Coroner

THE extraordinary circumstances surrounding the death of a County Dublin labourer, who was discovered to have arsenic in a plaster applied to a chest injury, were referred to by the County Dublin Coroner, Dr. J. P. Brennan, when he opened and adjourned an inquest yesterday, at the Londonbridge road Morgue, on James Styles (58), of Clondalkin, Co. Dublin.

"It is very, very important," the Coroner said, "that all the facts should be known, as there may be ramifications which may affect the public well-being. I have never before had anything like this in my area. About six years ago, this man was working at Baldonnel, when he sustained an injury to his chest. He never recovered, but about four months previous to his death, he went back to work. He was unable for the job, however, and was discharged after three months. His chest was still giving him trouble.

"Dr. Keane, of Clondalkin, advised him to go to hospital. He declined to do this, and, instead, according to reports, went to Carlow on August 26th, and came back with a white powder. He made this powder into a plaster and applied it to his chest. He died suddenly, while having tea with his family on September 8th."

"Dr. Keane," the Coroner continued, "who was requested to make a post-mortem examination, put the matter into the hands of the State Solicitor and requested assistance. Professor Matthew O'Connor, who conducted the post-mortem, asked for the assistance of the State Chemist. When the State Chemist examined certain organs and the plaster, he found a quantity of arsenic in the plaster, in the tissues of the man's chest, and in other organs."

"It is most important," said Dr. Brennan, "that the jury should have the fullest possible information."

Evidence of identification was given by Sergeant D. Redmond, Clondalkin.

Superintendent J. F. Hynes, Rathfarnham, asked for an adjournment, stating that there were various matters to be gone into. Since only a short time had elapsed since the information had been given to the State Solicitor, he was not yet ready. The case was very unusual and most involved.

The Coroner adjourned the inquest until Friday, October 22nd.

Winter Gardening

By G. O. Sherrard

THE gardener's diary of work for October is a full one. His first concern in the fruit garden will be the completion of the apple and pear harvest. Fruit have been very erratic in their maturing this season. Generally speaking, apples and pears have been fit to pick about a fortnight before their normal season. The apple, Lane's Prince Albert, which keeps till March, has begun to drop before Lord Derby, which ripens in November. Both of those varieties were picked this week in the Albert College orchard. Bramley's Seedling, Newton Wonder, Laxton's Superb and Allington Pippin have not yet been picked, but need careful watching. The test of readiness for picking with apples and pears is when the fruit parts easily from the branch when lifted. The best store is a cellar. Apples will also keep well in boxes of a bushel capacity stacked on top of one another with a small air space. If boxes are not used the apples keep better heaped three or four deep than they do in a single layer.

The planting of strawberries should be completed as soon as possible, and if it cannot be done before the end of the month it should be postponed till early in March.

VEGETABLES

In the vegetable garden two plantings of cabbage for spring cutting should be made—one next week and the second about the middle of the month. If cauliflower seed were not sown in the open last month it may now be sown in a frame to be pricked off when large enough into another frame for planting out in April. Lettuce can also be sown now in a frame to be planted out in February. May Queen is the best lettuce for this purpose, and, if not available, Passion White or All-the-Year-Round might be used.

Onions sown in August will be ready for planting out about the 10th October in well-manured ground. When all the tomatoes have been picked, but before the plants have been removed, it is a good plan to burn a sulphur candle in the house to disinfect it. After the removal of the tomato plants the borders can be dug and planted with lettuce or chrysanthemums can be brought in, the latter being housed by the middle of the month. Many tomatoes will ripen if stored in the dark in a warm room. All vacant ground should be dug and left rough for the winter.

The first work to be done in the flower garden is the removal of summer bedding plants, and their replacement by those for flowering in spring. If possible, this work should be completed before the middle of the month, so that plants will get established before winter sets in. The principal spring bedding plants are wallflowers, Brompton stocks, primroses (polyanthus and Julias hybrids), pansies, myosotis, coloured daisies, arabis and aubretia, the best bulbous plants are tullips. The beds will need a dressing of manure to replace the plant food removed by the summer occupants. Wallflowers, which should be spaced at 10 ins. if bushy, otherwise at 8 ins., to my mind, look best when mixed.

Operations involving the movement of large quantities of soil, such as trenching or the making of a herbaceous border, or of a rockery, are more easily carried out this month than later on when the soil has become sodden with the winter's rains.

Boy Left School Unable to Read

A fifteen-year-old boy, who had reached fifth standard in school—which he had just left — stated in Dublin District Court yesterday that he was unable to read, though able to sign his name. The case was one in which Christopher C. Matchett, Mount Pleasant Buildings, was charged with breaking and entering the shop of Mary Molloy, 13 Rathgar road, and stealing 14lb. of tea, 9 tins of fruit, 4lbs. of sugar, etc., to the value of £6/5/2.

According to Detective-Officer Burns, the boy had made and signed a statement that he heard Matchett asking his (the boy's) mother if she would sell tea for him, and she replied that she would. Yesterday, in the witness box, the boy said he did not remember making the statement, but he remembered signing the paper. When the statement was handed to him, he said he could not read it.

The accused man was remanded for a week.

Jail for Conversion of Stamps

"Although I have taken into account the evidence of Mr. W. T. Cosgrave, T.D., Dr Lorcan Sherlock, and others in respect of good character, I could not impose a lesser sentence than nine months' imprisonment." This was stated by Judge Connolly in the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court yesterday when passing sentence on William A. P. Mullet, of Scalp William House, Ballinacles road, Killiney, former Secretary of the National Savings Committee, who pleaded guilty on Monday to having converted to his own use stamps, the property of the Committee, to the value of £325.

PRIME FATTENING FARM FOR SALE,

GINNETT'S, SUMMERHILL.

I HAVE been favoured with instructions from H. THORNBURGH HANBURY, Esq., to SELL BY PUBLIC AUCTION at MY OFFICE, HIGH STREET, TRIM, on SATURDAY, 16th OCTOBER, 1943, ALL H. Interest and Goodwill in and to that part of the Lands of GINNETT'S GREAT, containing 203 acres 0 roods 2 perches, Statute Measure; also Part of the Lands of READSTOWN, containing 4 acres 0 roods 18 perches, held together subject to an annuity of £53 13s. 4d. payable to the Irish Land Commission, Poor Law Valuation £195 10s. 0d., with a herd's dwellinghouse thereon.

The Lands all under grass (no tillage), are well sheltered, watered and free from disease, being laid-out in convenient grazing divisions, renowned for their fattening properties and early growth. Part of the Lands, containing 65 Irish acres, are set for grazing to the 1st December next; the remainder is in the owner's hands, on which there is an abundance of luxuriant keep.

This first-class Grazing Farm is one of the most attractive to come on the market many years, and Auctioneers wishes to draw attention to the very low Land Commission Annuity and P.L.V. To investors the Sale affords a rare opportunity of acquiring a capital investment, as from a letting point of view the profit rent would be very considerable.

The Property is situated midway between Trim and Summerhill, in one of the best grazing districts in County Meath, only twenty-five miles from Dublin, the Hon. Edward Patrick Waters, lives on the farm, and will point out the Lands to intending purchasers.

Sale at 2.30 p.m. (new time).

Further particulars and Conditions of Sale from—

IN MEMORIAM.

BRYAN—11th Anniversary — To the cherished, unfading memory of our beloved Donough, R.I.P. Ever in our thoughts.—Mumminen and Pookeen.

CALLINGHAM—In loving memory of our darling Loris, lost in the R.M.S. Leinster, October 10th, 1918. "Lest we forget."—Mother.

CHAMBERS—Second Anniversary—In loving memory of Graham Anthony, younger son of Dr. and Mrs. Redmond Chambers.

DWYER—Eighth Anniversary — Sir Frederick Conway Dwyer, died 10th of October, 1935. R.I.P.

GENTLEMAN—In eternal memory of Lily Gentleman, artist and singer, who fell asleep on the 8th October, 1938. Sorrowful the hearts that beat to earth's slow pulse for youth is still like poppies bled, red-petalled in the wounded wheat.
They who had power heard not your voice,
in Art serene in Beauty pure, when pleading its rich tones did ring in glory of the earth love-blessed.
But when the harvesting is done
of Pride, Ambition, and the acrid tongue, and castles, churches, cities, homes,
lie rubble for Death's gathering, then maybe some will listen to your song in soul's lone deep whose ears alone had cupped its charm. Then shall they turn to what is best eternal Art, and build afresh this lovely earth to your sweet song.

KEHOE—Sixth Anniversary—In sad and loving memory of dear Gerard who departed this life, October 9, 1937, at 144 Rathmines road. Masses offered. Always remembered by his parents, sister and brothers.

LEE—In proud and loving remembrance of Captain Robert Ernest Lee, R.A.M.C., lost in R.M.S. Leinster disaster, 10th October, 1918; also of Lieutenant Joseph Bagnall Lee, Royal Munster Fusiliers, killed in action, Gallipoli, on 7th August, 1915.

MILLS—In sweet memory of my darling husband William T. Mills, entered Rest, 9th October, 1940. Oh, what loneliness, since he comes home no more.

REID (née Magee)—First Anniversary—In sorrowful, loving memory of my dear wife, Gertrude Maud, late of Hibernian Bank House, Delvin, who finished her saintly life on earth on 10th October, 1942. Also deeply mourned by her mother, brother, and sister, other relatives, and Trixie.
"O Compassionate Lord Jesus, grant her Eternal Rest." Masses offered in Delvin, 9th October, and in St. Peter's, Phibsboro', 10th October.
"She will always live in the hearts of those she loved."
T. S. Reid, Delvin.

TOMKINS—In loving memory of Alice Emily Tomkins, called Home October 10th, 1942. Sadly missed by husband and family.
